

Sean Crump

Sean is a Purpose Capitalist TM and an inclusion collaborator. After breaking his neck in 2004 from a diving accident, he now lives his life as a quadrapolegic. At the time, Sean was faced with the choice of being angry and focusing on what he lost, or being grateful for what he still had. Choosing the latter, Sean has dedicated the better part of his professional career to bettering accessibility and inclusion in society.

As the co-founder of Included by Design, Sean's goal is to create communities where all people feel comfortable conducting daily tasks, participating in social events and contributing to their economic well-being as though spaces were designed to accommodate all people regardless of their unique characteristics.

Sean is a seasoned public speaker and facilitates workshops on accessibility and inclusion. His bold communication style paired with his in-depth knowledge in universal design, accessibility, and disability inclusion will captivate and inspire your guests.
